Fund Manager's Comments

The Fund was up 0.10% in July exactly in line with our benchmark, which has a current higher market exposure. We recently added a new short Theme to our portfolio which we called « Running Too high ». Excessive valuations in sportswear and especially footwear pushed us to be cautious on names such as Under Armour, Nike and Adidas. Sports apparel is a particularly strong niche in the consumer sector but valuations are at very high levels, especially following the recent Olympic boost. Current valuations do not seem to include a tougher US market due to heightened competition, excess inventory and increasing pushback by retailers on products pricing. For the first time in many years, Nike experiments a strong competition and is currently losing market shares. Moreover its large size and its dominant position make it difficult to sustain current growth. Recently, Adidas experienced a strong momentum in old-fashioned sport style products, but even combined with the new CEO arrival, it is difficult to justify current valuation. Finally, Under Armour has a very strong brand especially among younger consumers but the company need to consistently grow revenue by more than 25% per year in order to justify its high premium which may be problematic in this current low growth environment.
